

GM corn and sick honey bees – what's the link?

No farmer in their right mind wants to poison pollinators. When I spoke with one Iowa corn farmer in January and told him about the upcoming release of a Purdue study confirming corn as a major neonicotinoid exposure route for bees, his face dropped with worn exasperation.

View the original article here: GM corn and sick honey bees – what's the link?