

Decoding synthetic biology

Biology Professor Vincent Martin describes synthetic biology as applying principles of engineering to biology — understanding how different pieces work together through modelling in order to produce a predictable result.

View the original article here: Decoding synthetic biology – News@Concordia