

Sorghum should be in the biofuel crop mix, experts say

Sweet and biomass sorghum would meet the need for next-generation biofuels to be environmentally sustainable, easily adopted by producers and take advantage of existing agricultural infrastructure, a group of researchers led by Purdue University scientists believes.

View the original article here: Sorghum Should Be in the Biofuel Crop Mix, Experts Say – Science Daily \(press release\)