

Blood-brain barrier building blocks forged from human stem cells

The blood-brain barrier may be poised to give up some of its secrets as researchers at the University of Wisconsin-Madison have created in the laboratory dish the cells that make up the brain's protective barrier.

View the original article here: Blood-Brain Barrier Building Blocks Forged from Human Stem Cells – Science Daily