

Science Minister: more focus needed on agricultural research, including GM

Britain must place a renewed focus on agricultural research including GM projects, or risk falling behind other countries like Brazil, the Science Minister has said.

View the original article here: David Willetts: more focus needed on agricultural research, including GM – Daily Telegraph