

Organic agriculture: Is it a religion?

image not found or type unknown

No person would choose organic food over conventional food on objective grounds to address regional needs or world hunger. Its support is based on a number of false assumptions, says blog writer David Leyonhjelm.

View the original article here: Organic agriculture: Is it a religion?