

France's Le Foll to keep biotech-crops ban, Le Monde says

French Agriculture Minister Stephane Le Foll wants to keep the country's moratorium on existing genetically-modified crops, Le Monde said, citing an interview. Existing genetically-modified crops are "not satisfactory," and bio-resistance to modified corn in the U.S. is "a real subject of concern," Le Foll said, according to the daily.

View the original article here: France's Le Foll to Keep Biotech-Crops Ban, Le Monde Says – Bloomberg