

GM crops on the rise in Portugal

The growing of genetically modified (GM) corn in Portugal increased by 59 percent last year, being planted in 7,724 hectares of fields, compared to the 4,900 hectares planted in 2010, a study by the Ministry of Agriculture has revealed.

View the original article here: GM crops on the rise in Portugal – The Portugal News