

Anti-biotech food activists' drive for mandatory labeling takes a double hit

Opponents of agriculture biotechnology have been loudly hailing the certification of a mandatory genetically enhanced food labeling ballot initiative in California. But two largely unreported setbacks in recent weeks should give these activists pause, as these developments threaten both their public relations and legal strategies in California and elsewhere.

View the original article here: Anti-Biotech Food Activists' Drive for Mandatory Labeling Takes ...