

EU science advisor: Policy shouldn't trump science regarding GMO's

Politicians sometimes shy away from science, but they should be clear about why they reject scientific evidence in future, the European Commission's first chief scientific advisor told EurActiv. In an interview, she says GMOs are a good example of where policy has trumped science.

View the original article here: EU science advisor: Policy shouldn't trump science regarding GMO's