

Eurogenes Genetic Ancestry Project: There's something very North Eurasian about Indo-European

Recently we learned that Europeans, especially North Europeans, are actually very North Eurasian genetically (see here). Then, last week, scientists studying languages in a similar way to genes discovered deep affinities between Indo-European, Uralic and Altaic languages. Below are a couple of figures from that study, and I have to say they look amazing, because it seems they match my experiments with the ADMIXTURE software in trying to elucidate the peopling of Europe and the origins of the Indo-Europeans.

View the original article here: Eurogenes Genetic Ancestry Project: There's something very North ...