

Zombie alert? Male DNA found in women's brains might prevent disease

image not found or type unknown

Male DNA found in the brains of women appears to have come from male fetuses they carried when pregnant, and it may have both positive and negative effects, including the prevention of disease. Researchers believe that DNA from male and female fetuses might cross into mothers' genes.

Additional Resources:

- Bearing sons can alter your mind, New Scientist

View the original article here: Zombie alert? Male DNA found in women's brains might prevent disease