

Center for Genetics and Society escalates attack on life-saving gene therapy

CGS, a “progressive” but uber conservative-minded advocacy group that opposes many medical technology innovations is continuing its campaign against gene therapy on the grounds that changing a person’s DNA coding is a ‘violation’ of ethical principles, claiming it should be “off limits”. It’s a classic precautionary argument rooted in an almost pre-genetic understanding of science.

View the original article here: Center for Genetics and Society escalates attack on life-saving gene therapy