

New gene-altering drug paves way for mass human modification

We've seen genetically modified mosquitoes, genetically modified plants, and genetically modified cows, but could we soon be dealing with our own genetic alterations – genetically modified humans? As the months and years pass, scientists seem to be getting closer to 'manufacturing' humankind, with some of the most recent 'advancements' revolving around a new approved drug therapy that is designed to 'correct genetic errors'.

View the original story here: Genetically Modified Humans? New Gene-Altering Drug Paves Way for Mass Modification