

Scientists respond to controversial Séralini maize study

The fallout continues over the questionable study by French molecular biologist Gilles-Eric Seralini of rats fed genetically engineered rice. Food and Chemical Toxicology, which published the article in mid-September, has now printed a series of letters in response to the study.

View the original article here: Scientists respond to controversial Séralini maize study