

Harvard's Richard Lewontin mangles population genetics review

Discover's blogger Razib Khan's dissects famed and flawed Harvard evolutionary biologist Richard Lewontin's odd take down in the New York Review of Books of two recent books on "Jewish genetics". Lewontin is controversially known for his uber-leftist ideology and increasingly dated views of population genetics. According to Razib, these tendencies are in sharp relief in his limp review of two pretty good and measured books.

Related Articles:

- "Am I partly Jewish? An unexpected turn of events," Genomes Unzipped
- "Jews are a 'Race', Genes Reveal," The Jewish Daily Forward

View the original article here: Richard Lewontin against the age