

Canada: Food security and GM food regulation growing issues

Over the last decade, the desire to grow food at home and in community gardens has grown rapidly, pushed along by people of all ages who feel that our food supply is in jeopardy.

In essence, the status quo just won't grow so people have taken matters into their own hands and gardens. I have to be careful talking about our food supply because the giant multinational corporations that control genetically modified or genetically engineered food production would sue me into poverty and shame for stating my opinion.

View the original article here: Food security a growing issue