

Evolution may contradict 'dumb jock' notion

According to a popular stereotype, intellectual achievement and athleticism are inversely linked. Now a controversial view of evolution suggests that animal brains, including humans, may have developed in response to physical activity.

View the original article here: Exercise and the Ever-Smarter Human Brain