

Synthetic biology research community grows significantly

The following is an excerpt.

The number of private and public entities conducting research in synthetic biology worldwide grew significantly between 2009 and 2013, according to the latest version of an interactive map produced by the Synthetic Biology Project at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars.

Read the full article here: Synthetic Biology Research Community Grows Significantly