

Stem cells found in liposuctioned fat

The following is an excerpt.

Liposuction has long epitomized unbridled vanity. Now those who undergo the procedure can claim to be serving the public good. According to a paper published in the Public Library of Science by Gregorio Chazenbalk, of the University of California, Los Angeles, and his colleagues, fatty tissue extracted during liposuction may prove instrumental in a sort of stem-cell therapy.

Read the full story here: Much to muse about