

Natural products association believes market-driven approach better than laws for GE labeling

A market-driven approach that allows consumers to opt for foods made without genetically modified ingredients is preferable to mandatory labeling via either state or federal statutes, according to the United Natural Products Alliance.

Read the full story here: Market-driven approach better than laws for GE labeling