

Conservation biology, ideology and the dangers of censorship

If conservation science is in service to an agenda, then it seems inevitable that research would at times be viewed through a political or ideological prism. The Nature reviewer's politically minded comments [to a paper submitted to the science journal by Canadian ecologist Mark Vellend] provide a case in point.

The GLP aggregated and excerpted this article to reflect the diversity of news, opinion and analysis. Read full, original post: The Science Police